The estate has a vineyard area of 5.5 hectares, planted with the mix of varieties typical for the Rheingau region – 90 per cent Riesling and four per cent Pinot Noir. In addition, there are some unusual varieties, such as Merlot (two per cent), which we mention as its attractive notes of herbs and spices have left a positive impression. The Pinot Noir shows wild roses on the nose, and rosehip on the palate. As is the case with the two red wines, the alcohol levels this year are generally pleasantly moderate; the wines are elegant rather than filling. Fabian Schmidt makes good use of the potential of his Riesling vines, some of which are 40 years old, in his three »Alten Reben« (old vines), these are fermented in old, large oak vats. The wines have clear fruit and well-balanced acidity, with spicy notes typical of the Rheingau. The ice wine shows clear Riesling fruit, with notes of figs and candied white fruit on the palate.
